ITX awarded $650,000 contract from USDA APHIS

Fort Collins, Colorado, January 2, 2007 – Information Technology Experts, Inc. (ITX) today announced that the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), Veterinary Services (VS) Centers for Epidemiology and Animal Health (CEAH) has awarded the company a Delivery Order contract through September 30, 2007, with a total estimated value of $650,000.

Work to be performed in Fort Collins includes software development, help desk services, and database development, as well as investigating and recommending options for geographic information systems (GIS) technologies and hand-held devices that will be used in the field.

Ross Ridgeway, ITX Program Manager for USDA, will manage the staff and oversee all work associated with this delivery order. “ITX values our long-term relationship with USDA, and we are excited to expand our support into the APHIS organization. We look forward to working with the CEAH team on these mission-critical programs and systems,” said Ridgeway.
